THIS RE-READING of the Cuban Revolution from the perspective of socialist-humanism engages unresolved issues in the notion of human development popularized by the United Nations Development Programme. UNDP and other agencies of international cooperation for development give a human face to a capitalist development process that is anything but humane. This title argues that understanding Cuba provides an alternative model

HENRY VELTMEYER, PhD (1975) in Political Science, McMaster University, is Professor of Development Studies at the Universidad Autónoma de Zacatecas (Mexico) and Saint Mary's University (Canada). He has published extensively on the political economy of globalization and developments in Latin America. Recent publications include The Critical Development Studies Handbook: Tools for Change.

MARK RUSHTON, PhD (2010), in Development Studies, Universidad Autónoma de Zacatecas, is a freelance consultant, copy-editor, academic translator and author, with a specialist interest in Cuba and the development implications of information technology.
